UNINVITED GUESTS.
STRANGE VISITORS AT LONDON DANCE.

Writing in a London contemporary the other day a correspondent relates that in the early stages of a dance in one of London's smartest ballrooms he was sitting by the entrance, listening to the newcomers being announced.

"Suddenly two people in appearance and manner entirely out of keeping with the fashionable surroundings presented themselves. To add to the mystery of their presence they were ushered in under different names, as 'Miss' and 'Mr.'—a sufficiently curious combination, since it is not customary for an unmarried girl to attend dances in hotels under the chaperonage of a young man."

Of late such an experience has been most frequent. Not long ago a hostess, having sent out 300 invitations in connection with a dance at a hotel, received 250 acceptances. However, when the account was to hand, it was noticed that 340 guests were being charged for.

From the fact of the increase in number, the lady demanded an explanation from the manager of the hotel. Thereupon she was informed that an almost complete list of the names of the guests present would be submitted. Subsequently a list of 320 names arrived. In a letter accompanying it the writer explained that the fifteen names unaccounted for were those of persons who, not wishing to be announced, did not give their names. After a close scrutiny of the list, it was discovered that of the ninety extra persons six were but acquaintances, whilst the others were total strangers. Nevertheless, the account rendered was duly settled.

But is it not surprising that people should attend social gatherings without invitations? Indeed, the audacity of it is overwhelming. Are there no ways or means of halting the wilds of these pests of Society?

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR FAMILY.
WHEN you fail to provide your family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at the season of the year, you are neglecting them, as bowel complaint is sure to be prevalent, and it is too dangerous a malady to be trifled with. This is especially true if there are children in the family. A dose or two of this remedy will place the trouble within control and perhaps save a life, or at least a doctor's fee. For sale by all Chemists and Storekeepers.

three months, when, in their opinion, it will be seen that the state of business will not warrant the pressing of the men's demands. The workers think otherwise, are restive in temper, and are restricting overtime both on old and new work in the shops. The boiler-makers' ballot has resulted in the decision to give a month's notice, and there are fears of something like a general stoppage in the shipbuilding industry.

A sequel to recent industrial discontent and disputes is found in the grip which railway companies are putting on commerce. The English railway companies gave notice that on the first of this month they would increase their rates on the carriage of goods on a four-per cent. basis, and that on certain merchandise the percentage will be even higher. Judging from the remarkably good railway traffic and profits of the half-year, the companies have no need to place this additional burden on manufacturers and traders; but as a sequel to the settlement of the railway strike, they have the sanction of Parliament to do so and they evidently intend to take the fullest advantage of their privilege. The arrangement, or compact, is most inimical to the commercial prosperity of the country and the Empire, for not only will the new schedule of charges check trade and increase the price of goods to the consumer, but it admits a new and pernicious principle—that if the railway men are granted concessions, every time they strike it will be open to the railway companies, backed by the Government, to compensate themselves by still further increases of railway rates. The policy is the reverse of a business policy; and it has naturally caused a ferment in the manufacturing and goods-distributing districts. The feeling of most people who have invested capital in industry is that railway carriage should be cheaper, not dearer, especially considering the recent additions to the cost of manufacture; and both producers and merchants contend that the higher rates are both unnecessary and unjust.

Mr. Alfred Saxon, a prominent Lancashire engineer, goes so far as to say that the railway companies are making a mistake in their own interests, inasmuch as the imposition of higher railway rates will lead to the loss of a large amount of local traffic, seeing that manufacturers, certainly for all short distances, will convey their raw material and goods by motorlorries. Manufacturers and traders are indignantly protesting against the additional rates on goods traffic, which promise to bring nearly three millions a year extra into the coffers of the railway companies. The whole question is to be raised in the House of Commons, but inasmuch as the increased rates have been sanctioned by Parliament, the companies, for a time at all events, will gather a rich harvest.

ALLEGED MURDER.

STABBED WITH A FILE.

During a quarrel at Yau-mai on Thursday between some Chinese fitters and boat people, a friend of one of the latter was stabbed in the abdomen with a file. He was taken to hospital and died next day. His assailant was brought up at the Police Court this morning, charged with murder, and upon the application of Inspector Gerard a remand was granted.

ASSAULTED A CONSTABLE.

DISORDERLY HAWKER.

Before Mr. Melbourne at the Magistrate's Court this morning a Chinese hawker living in Jubilee Street was charged with assaulting Police-constable Reynolds, and damaging his uniform. Mr. P. J. J. Widdowson, Deputy Superintendent of Police, who prosecuted, informed the Magistrate that the hawker in Jubilee Street was exceedingly turbulent, and the only way to put a stop to the trouble he caused was to impose heavy sentences on offenders. Several times when arresting lawless constables had been asked. When P. C. Reynolds arrested the prisoner he broke away, and when caught again he struck the constable. For the assault prisoner was sent to prison with hard labour for six weeks, with four hours' exercise in the stocks, and was also fined $10 for hawking without a licence, and $1 for damaging the constable's uniform.

EX VICEROY IN HONGKONG.

A SIGNIFICANT POLITICAL VISIT.

Shin Chun Hsin, who at one time filled the important office of Viceroy of Canton, and who, previous to the Revolution, was a terrible enemy of those who were working to bring about the overthrow of the Manchus, arrived in Hongkong this morning.

It is stated that he is travelling for the benefit of his health, but there can be little doubt that his visit to the South has great political significance.

After the Revolution, Shin threw in his lot wholeheartedly with the new government, and was appointed assistant director of Chinese railways under Dr. Sun Yat Sen. Later he was promoted to the command of troops at Nanking, but Wing Hing was spurned over his head. When he was given his railway post Shin became a member of the Kuo ming t'ung. He was a strong opponent of the Quintuple Loan, and when the agreement was signed supported the independent cause, he being stated that he has taken an active part in the rebellion.

Two telegrams were received from Shanghai yesterday each giving a different reason for his visit. One stated that he had come South for the benefit of his health, and the other and much more likely one, that he had been sent to Canton to advise the people not to protest against the independence movement.

It is a significant fact that Shin's name is on the list of persons whose the traders of Shanghai petitioned the Municipal Council a few days ago, to be taken in the interest of peace and good order.

A representative of the China Mail, who sought an interview this afternoon with the ex-Viceroy, who is staying at the King Edward Hotel, was informed that he is sick, and can see nobody at present.

SIN-SHAI-CHOW FALLS.

The Northern forces commanded by Chan Shun, and Yeo Chai-chung combined and attacked Fan Hing's Southern troops at Sin-Shai-Chow, and gained a great victory, capturing the city.

The South China Daily News of the 24th inst. brings details of the first attack on the Kiangnan Arsenal, near Shanghai, by the Southerners, who, as photographed to us at the time by our Shanghai correspondent, were repulsed.

THE ATTACK.

After the many well-known rumours of an attack on the Arsenal, which have been current during the past week, the assault actually took place daily yesterday morning (26th inst.), and after three or four hours' furious firing, resulted in the repulse of the southern troops. From many points the Arsenal was attacked simultaneously, and those who witnessed the attack by capture it from the Lungshui side, expressed their opinion that but for the presence of the Navy and their assistance to the occupants, this assault would have prevailed. The other attacks were courageously met by the northern forces in their Arsenal, just as bravely as they had been delivered, but thanks to the defence which were in existence and those improvised during the past few days, the defenders had the better of matters. Heavy losses are reported on the side of the assailants, although at the moment it is impossible to give an accurate figure, while the inhabitants of the surrounding districts have suffered cruelly. On the other hand, the losses inside the Arsenal have been of the slightest description.

THE BATTLE OPENS.

Shooting was heard at a quarter past two o'clock in the morning, but this was no more than the desultory shots which have been heard during almost every night for the past week. This by no means indicated the opening of the attack, for the latter was timed from 3 a.m., and at this hour it took place. The assault was planned by General Chen Chai-mei, and Col. Liu Fupiao, leader of the "Dare-to-Die" was entrusted with the chief of the principal attacks. These "Dare-to-Die" had arrived from Nanking on Tuesday, bringing with them several field guns as well as quick-firers, and in the course of the engagement these came into play against the heavier metal of the Arsenal.

It seems to have been the plan to make an attack simultaneously from all sides, the principal points being the Chinese City, St. Catherine's Bridge and Lungshui. From the Chinese City the movement would front the east gate of the Arsenal, but its left flank would extend along the forebore an attack might well hope to succeed. From St. Catherine's Bridge two routes lead to gates of the Arsenal, and the camps situated here would be able to provide reinforcements where necessary. On the Lungshui side the southern troops had gathered in force, and were in an excellent position had land forces only been concerned.

The attack from Lungshui was the first to start, and practically at 9 a.m. the booming of guns announced that the fray was in train. The Southerners appear to have advanced well along this line, and considerably outnumbered the defenders. They pursued their advance without hesitation, keeping up a steady blaze on the Arsenal, and reached a point where they appeared likely to strike with advantage.

A COMBINED ASSAULT.

At the same time as this was in progress a dash on the Arsenal from the direction of the City and Chinese Bund was inaugurated. The men were abreast with enthusiasm and were led in two divisions, resembling roughly the two halves of a semi-circle. Immediately they were met by a well-directed fire from the northern troops, which were now entrenched well in front of the Arsenal, and this put a stop to their advance for the time being. A diversion was then made by the left wing, which moved with its guns towards the forebore, but in doing so it left the fire of the Arsenal defenceless. Immediately the right wing of the attackers replied, but the men were excited, and it has to be admitted that they placed away their powder with little judgment. However, the left wing had a gun in position against the Arsenal, and its boom was heard above all.

Consequently with these two other attacks, came the one from St. Catherine's Bridge, where the southern troops were on the roads. In addition to their riflemen they had machine guns, and it is stated that from the moment the attack was opened these guns never ceased their firing for a good half hour. So heavy was the fire on their side that the opposing parties, never came to really close quarters. The advances seem to have been pushed on with the utmost determination, but from their well-guarded positions the northern men replied with no less vigour. Roads lined by fairly tall trees intersected the country, and there are many graveyards and human habitations, so that the force of the firing on either side must have been minimized against the combatants.

NAVY TO THE FRONT.

It had been confidently stated all day before the assault by the leaders of the Kiangnan that the Navy would at least be neutral, but if the southern troops relied on this view they were learning on a broken reed.

As stated, the advance from the direction of Lungshui appeared promising for the Southerners, and thanks to their superior strength they seemed likely to carry the position. Unhappily for their project the Navy remained loyal to the North, and at what may have been a highly critical period in the contest one of the five cruisers came to the rescue. Since Saturday morning the boats from the Arsenal had been cleared for action, in readiness for getting up steam, and very shortly after the opening of the attack the Kiang-ching changed her position coming closer to the Arsenal, and opened fire in the assault.

For some time the attack had been in progress before she came into position to bear upon the southern soldiers, but now she opened her guns, and it is stated that the southern men crumpled up under her shell fire. They had advanced well, in skirmishing order, but now they broke and retreated in the utmost disorder. To all intents and purposes this put an end to the Lungshui attack for the morning, but from time to time during the continuance of the fighting the heavy guns of all the ships were to be heard.

THE CITY ATTACK.

At the same time as the Kiangching had this come to the assistance of the Arsenal defenders, the men who had made the attack from the direction of the City were repulsed. Two of our people were wounded, and many of the enemy's details were captured, but the enemy having now opened aided evidence of excitement were soon and the waste of powder and shot is said to have been enormous.

The fire from the Arsenal upon them was tremendous, probably aided by that of the men-of-war, for the latter could come into action just below the Arsenal, where the extreme left of this attack was to be found. The gun the southern men had mounted was somewhere near the drill ground which is met en route to the east gate of the Arsenal, but to so force a fire was this subjected that the men were compelled to abandon it and retire. One report says that the retreat was carried out in the most magnificent manner, the men keeping a correct interval between them, but on the other hand it is said that many fled absolutely pell-mell, throwing away their rifles in their haste to be out of the fire of the Arsenal guns. At any rate, the heavier fire of the Arsenal men drove this attack back, and here the casualties are believed to be very heavy, accompanied by the loss of other guns in addition to that mentioned.

THE VOLUNTEERS MOBILIZED.

At the early hour at which hostilities at the Arsenal were begun the local volunteers were quickly mobilized. At 3.30 a.m. Lieut. Col. Barnes gave orders for the whole of the Corps to turn out and messages were despatched to the homes of the volunteers by telephone and special messenger. The response was immediate, and before 4 a.m. volunteers were to be seen hurrying to their respective mobilization headquarters in full marching order, and carrying emergency ammunition. The Light Horse, mounted and fully armed, assembled at the Race Course and the Artillery proceeded to the gun shed, where the ponies were harnessed to the guns and everything was got in readiness for the order to move off. Practically the whole strength of this unit was in attendance. The Maxims, Engineers, Germans, Chinese and Buglers gathered at the S.V.C. headquarters, and "A" Company took up their place at the Town Hall.

In accordance with their standing instructions in case of mobilization this company at once laid out the fire appliances, and one of the men was detailed to take charge of the telephone. "B" Company hurried to the goal in Amy Road and shortly after arrival completed their arrangements for dealing with any contingency. The Customs Company assembled at the Customs Club, Choo Road, and the American Company lined up at the Victoria Fire Station. The Portuguese went to their club in North Szechuen Road, and the Japanese took up their stand at the Japanese Club in Woosung Road.

At lunch time these volunteers in the neighbourhood of the Race Course were unable to go home for their meal were provided withiffin at the Louis Police Station and the others at headquarters who were also unable to get away were provided for at the Central Police Station. The commissariat arrangements were "thoroughly" well managed.

At the Bund Bridge a contingent of the German and Chinese Companies were on duty all the day, and at the gunshed the Artillery had two guns in readiness the whole day to move off at moment's notice. All arrangements were perfected early in the day for catering for the troops, the Qu-Master Sergeants of the different units being in charge of the departments.

BOY SCOUTS AT WORK.

The Shanghai Boy Scouts were mobilized in the afternoon, when the first party was sent to the goal in Amy Road where they were placed under the command of Capt. Thomas, who is in charge of "B" Company, S.V.C. A second detachment placed themselves under Major Pilcher at the Town Hall, and a third party was sent to the S.V.C. headquarters. All these boys were drawn from the cyclists corps. In order to aid the wounded another large batch of boys possessing first aid badges was drafted to the Tientsin Road Red Cross Hospital, and others, with their first aid gear, took up positions on the roads leading from the scene of fighting.

EARLY MORNING SCENES.

Most extraordinary scenes were witnessed in the early morning in the Settlement, and not a few residents received a fright at the heavy and loud that was going on. The booming of the guns awakened hundreds of people, who crowded on to their verandas, and a few making their way to the Bund. Volunteers were to be seen hurrying from all quarters of the town, and from every police station scores of police were turned out on special duty.

Everything was perfectly orderly and the volunteer defenders went about their duties quietly, while the Police patrolled the streets in the customary unobtrusive manner.

A few minutes before four o'clock the sound of cannon was considerable and crowds of men and women partially dressed gathered on the French Bund. There was nothing to be seen, however, but more and more spirits ventured forth in sympathy. On the river there was intense excitement and sampans and motor boats, as well as a dozen or more launches, were to be seen moving in the direction of the Arsenal. One big launch carried a large contingent of Red Cross workers, apparently all for patients, but they passed up the river again less than an hour later, apparently having been unable to render any assistance.

A MUNICIPAL NOTIFICATION.

The following Municipal notification was issued:

The Council is in receipt of a letter from Admiral Chen Ju cheng, describing the attack on the Kiangnan Arsenal this morning in the following terms:

"At 3 o'clock this morning 8,000 of the enemy attacked the dock on three sides. The naval and land forces made a strong resistance until 8 o'clock, and the enemy was repulsed. Two of our people were wounded, and many of the enemy's details were captured, but the enemy having now opened hostilities it is of course necessary to stop water and land traffic. Asking you to take note."

In view of the foregoing, the public is warned against proceeding south of the Settlement either by road or by the Huangpu River.

By order,
W. E. Lavson,
Secretary.

REMOVED MURDER OF HUANG HSING.

Peking, July 23.
Rumours to the effect that General Huang Hsing has been assassinated by Nanking are very persistent here, but confirmation is not obtainable.

Speculation is busy as to the intentions of General Chang Hsun, who is stated to have proposed to the Southerners that he would join them if they agreed to nominate a Manchurian prince for the presidency of the Republic. The story is at least picturesque if it is not accurate.

A most persistent report in Shanghai yesterday was that Huang Hsing was back in Shanghai—N. C. Daily News.

REQUEST FOR AN ARMISTICE.

In the course of the evening the following information was received:

The Southern forces have asked for forty-eight hours' armistice, and it is thought that Admiral T'eng and Li may agree to this. But it is not certain as the latter was not properly accredited, and was however handed to a Red Cross doctor, who was able to vouch for its authenticity.

BLUEJACKETS TO BE LANDED IN SHANGHAI.

Reuters' Shanghai correspondent says that, in view of rebels scattering in the vicinity of Shanghai, the Municipal authorities after a Council meeting, decided to land bluejackets and establish pickets around the foreign settlement, as to prevent the passage of rebels.

NORTHERNS ADVANCING.

A message from Hankow states that the northerners have made a general advance. The rebels are retreating in confusion. The northerners crossed the Yangtze-kiang, captured Chingliang Island, and bombarding the forts at Hukow.

FOREIGNERS AT KULING.

A thousand foreigners in Kuling are urgently appealing for a naval gun.
